52     <h3>Greece</h3>
53     Christmas trees are popular in Greece, but you'll also find boats wrapped
54     in strings of lights, whether in the water or in the main square.
55     There are two explanations for the boat-decorating phenomenon:
56     The first is that the country's ancient maritime tradition means boats have 57     always been an integral part of the culture, so they were decorated long before
58     a modernized version of Christmas (including trees) came along. The second is that 59     St. Nicholas is considered the patron saint of sailors, which is probably why boats
60     are decorated on December 6th.

75         <h1>Venice Carnival</h1>
76         <h3>Venice, Italy</h3>
77         Venice Carnival, Italy Carnival traditions vary widely around the world,
78         from Mardi Gras in New Orleans to the Samba parades in Rio de Janeiro.
79         In Venice, Carnival is all about the masked costume balls. The most in-demand
80         ones like the famous Il Ballo del Doge, the official dinner at Ca 'Vendramin
81         Calergi and the popular Casanova Grand Ball, tend to be prohibitively expensive
82         and sell out quickly, but there are plenty of free events in addition to the balls.
83         As for the backstory, Venice Carnival is tied to a 12th-century Catholic custom that
84         likely evolved from winter solstice practices and marked a period of full-out debauché
85         before the no-fun season of Lent began. However, it can be argued that plenty of debau
86         can still be found today during the two weeks in February leading up to Lent.
